Across the UK, churches and denominations hold significant financial assets, collectively amounting to tens of billions of pounds. That money has the potential to help safeguard God's creation in the face of climate change.

Yet those entrusted with managing church finances are faced with an increasingly complex landscape, including the environmental and moral implications of AI, mining, fossil fuels, and emerging green technologies and solutions. As a result, church investments do not always align with Christian values or with churches' stated environmental commitments.

Operation Noah and Just Money Movement are convening a series of ecumenical events across the UK to encourage and equip church finance decision-makers to direct their financial resources in ways that support climate action, nature recovery, and social justice - values deeply rooted in Christian teaching.

Is this for me? Are you responsible for making decisions about church funds, either at a local or regional/national level? If so, yes! Are you interested in encouraging church action on climate change, or in green investment or banking? If so, also yes! We'd love to welcome anyone interested in using church money for the good of God's creation.

This event will bring together those responsible for managing church funds with inspiring, practical opportunities for ethical and green investment that address the climate crisis. There will be great speakers, interactive workshops, exhibitors showing climate impact, and a chance to connect with fellow financial stewards.

About us: For over 20 years, Operation Noah has inspired churches to take meaningful action on the climate crisis, including supporting denominations to divest from fossil fuels. The JustMoney Movement is a Christian charity that advocates for a financial system that is fairer, greener, and more just. Together, we're focused on mobilising Church capital for a proactive transition to a clean, just, and resilient future.
